1 East Retford

The small, and attractive Market Town of East Retford in North Nottinghamshire is one of the oldest boroughs in England and is steeped in history and local folklore, from the notorious Highwayman, Dick Turpin, to the founders of the New World. Retford flourished when the Great North Road was rerouted through the town in 1766, the market square became a hive of activity, with its scores of public houses and inns, attracting a bustling passing trade. The arrival of the railway and the Chesterfield Canal saw many changes, and by the 20th century the population had significantly increased. This lovely town continues to grow and flourish with its eclectic choice of bars, cafes, restaurants, galleries, theatres and shops.

Experience

Visit Bassetlaw Museum's new pilgrim gallery and learn about the history of local life and the Pilgrim Story. View the impressive Georgian architecture, and the French Romanesque inspired design of the impressive Town Hall. Also don't forget to visit the centre for rural life within the museum.

2 Babworth

Dating back to the 15th Century, All Saints Church in the quintessentially English hamlet of Babworth, is the spiritual home of the Mayflower Pilgrims, the early settlers of Plymouth, Massachusetts.

The country lanes are lined with Evergreens bursting with wildlife. Small paths and winding tracks take you to the little church, hidden amongst some of the area's oldest trees. All Saints Church is particularly special and is one of the prettiest settings in North Nottinghamshire; it was here that preacher Richard Clifton was Rector from 1586 to 1605. The 1950s saw the discovery of Clifton's ceremonial Chalice and Geneva bible that were concealed away in a sealed crypt.

This wonderful Church also houses the world-famous mouse carvings, by Robert (Mousey) Thompson, a treat to find as they are hidden amongst the hand-crafted furniture in the chancel and sanctuary.

Experience

Listen to the story of how one young boy discovered the crypt where the Chalice and Bible were found, and view replicas of those historical findings. Search for the hidden Mayflower Mice, hear family stories of life in the hamlet of Babworth, explore the beautiful woodland setting and walk along the Pilgrim Way.

The Pilgrim 400 Apple Story

The Pilgrim 400 apple blossom

This humble, yet very special Apple is set to make its mark on British Heritage and culture, in commemoration of the Mayflower Pilgrims. The King of all fruits, the beautiful 'Pilgrim 400', is a new variety, discovered and cultivated by Nottinghamshire horticulturalist, writer and presenter, John Stirland.

In 2015, John Stirland had the idea to celebrate the Mayflower 400 anniversary in a significant way. During his time as a BBC Radio gardening advisor, he discovered a seedling in a garden in Southwell, Nottinghamshire, the home of the Iconic Bramley Apple; which coincided with the development of a new commemorative 'Mayflower' apple in Devon.

The Pilgrim 400 is a multipurpose variety, with a deliciously sweet taste and a crunchy texture, perfect for all manner of culinary delights, either cooking or eating.

A number of these exquisite trees are to be planted in various locations along key destinations of the Mayflower Pilgrim Trail and can be viewed on this tour.

A great tribute to mark the occasion
